SUNDAY SCHOOL RE-ORGANIZATION

A meeting of the teachers and officers of the Sunday School of the First Baptist Church was held on Monday evening at the home of J. H.
Goss. A reorganization of the classes making a more workable division of the classes and the appointment of some new teachers were some of the items of business transacted.

The primary class was organized into a department by itself with Mrs.
T. W. Gales as Supt. The Red and Blue contest to increase the attendance at the Sunday School of First Baptist Church has been closed with the Reds decidedly in the lead. This contest has resulted in an increased interest and attendance. Another contest will be started very soon.

Work of Graduates.

What the Graduates of Rhinelander High School Do.

For the information of those who think a High School education is a failure, also for the benefit of those who still think only five per cent of the graduates of a High School do something further in educational work at higher institutions we print a list of the graduates of Rhinelander High School for the past five years and show in what lines their energies have been used since graduation. The class of 1907 is necessarily omitted as they have

REPORT ON WATER WORKS.

The following are the findings of the committee appointed by the president of the Municipal League on the water works proposition:

Rhinelander, Wis., June 27, 1907.

Report of committee on purchase of water works. We find as follows:
The property if replaced new, would cost as per estimates.....$100,000.00
Total mileage of pipes, 13 miles, 1070 ft

Total weight of pipe, cast iron.....2,652,087
Total weight of pipe, galvanized.....305,248

Present value of similar pipe, at $30.00 per ton.....72,402.49
92 gates, 92 boxes, 110 hydrants, 44450 lb lead packing, 4125 lb Jute.....8,628.20

Estimated cost of laying pipe, at present time, $20.00 per mile.....34,238.00
Stand pipe, well, pump house, etc.....10,000.00

Engineer's house and 2 lots.....1,800.00
Total, to replace at present cost.....$106,068.69

Cost of extensions by City, actual cost price.....$37,520.27
Add 1/2, to represent what it would probably cost now.....12,600.75
Balance being what it would cost to replace the original plant, at present prices.....50,041.07

Deducting 1/2 from this, to represent advance in values since pipe was bought and put in.....18,013.89

Probable original cost of plant.....32,027.78

Now add cost of extensions made by city.....37,520.27
New pump now being built, with cost of installing.....3,500.00

Other additions of pipe to be made this season.....10,000.00
Total.....$89,048.05

On this are outstanding $53,000.00 in bonds, which are evidently worth par, considering the value of the plant.

The bond holders offer to throw off $3,000.00 of these, and to take new bonds at 1 per cent less rate of interest for the balance, making a saving to us as follows:

Reduction in bonds.....$3,000.00
3 years interest on $75,000.00, 1 per cent.....2,250.00

We also continue the present low rate on water, the lowest in the state, and city will pay no charge for hydrant rentals, as would be the case should there be a sale of the property to an outside corporation. 110 hydrants at $40.00 apiece, would be $4400.00 per year, and even for 3 years this would amount to 13,200.00

And if continued for 10 years longer, the life of the franchise, would amount to.....40,400.00

Signed,

C. P. Crosby, Chairman.

ANTIGO'S SCHOOL FIGHT.

Our sister city, Antigo is stirred to the foundation over the election of a City Superintendent of Schools. In January, the teachers' committee of three reported against the re-election of the present Superintendent and when the question came to a vote by the full School Board, there were six for and six against. Ballot after ballot brought no material change and today the same conditions exist. In that city, the members of the board are elected in the respective wards the second Tuesday in July which will be July 9 this year.

Of the six members of the board whose terms of office do not expire four are for re-election and two against.
Of the six whose terms do expire, one in each of the six wards, four are against and two are for re-election.
Of course, there will be no election of Superintendent until the election of members of the board by the people.
The six members of the board who are against re-election—four whose terms expire and two who hold over, came out with a three and a half column article last week giving their reasons. The following are some of the statements:

"We found on investigation, that he was nervous, fretful and irritable, constantly lecturing the pupils, giving what they called 'penny lectures' nearly every day. That by this he was accomplishing nothing so far as government was concerned. That he would use corporal punishment in the assembly room of the high school in the presence of a large number of pupils, and was constantly losing control of the school and the respect of the scholars. That certain stories were being circulated through the school, true or untrue, we are unable to state, regarding his mental condition and his personal habits. We found on investigation, that pupils were using disrespectful epithets toward him, not only in and about the school building and grounds, but at public gatherings and places wherever he might be discussed by them.

"So far as we were able to learn there was a general dislike for his methods. That he did not look after the young men, allowing them to gather at public resorts, indulging in injurious habits and failing to properly advise them and bring about influences tending to better their conditions. Some people claiming that the public functions that he seemed to make the most of was the public dance after the basket ball games, and we must say that he, as manager of the athletic association permitted these basket ball dances to become so promiscuous that many complaints were made by parents and it was necessary for the board to request him to prohibit them altogether.

"Another fault which we believe a serious one is his lack of decision. He will make a rule, or decide upon a question, promise or deny the pupils certain things; and within a short time if any pressure is brought to bear, will change his position. He seems to have the faculty of agreeing with whoever happens to be talking with him. This attitude may do for a politician, but we believe a school teacher should be considerate and firm. No one will detect quicker the lack of firmness than a child and no one will take advantage of it quicker than a child.

It is our opinion that the principal and superintendent of our school should be a graduate of a reputable college, university, or at least have taken a full course in a normal school.

These matters, together with many others we do not deem it necessary to publish, seemed to us serious."

It seemed too bad to see a community rent and an election based upon the retention or rejection of one man but as such is the case, we shall watch with interest the will of the people as expressed by their ballots
July 9.

SCHOOL CENSUS COMPLETED.

City Clerk Swedberg completed the census of children of school age last Saturday night. The law requires that a census shall be taken as near the thirtieth day of June as possible.
The amount of money received by a school district from the state is based upon the number of children of school age residing within the district.

While there has been no startling increase, the growth in our city has been uniform; this year's number over last is sixty-three.

Since the work of taking the census from year to year has been done by the City Clerk, the results show a much greater degree of accuracy. The second ward has the largest number of children and the fourth by far the smallest number. The following is the number by wards:

Pupils of school age	Males	Females	Total
First ward	151	129	280
Second ward	172	180	352
Third ward	147	148	295
Fourth ward	94	120	214
Fifth ward	134	176	310
Sixth ward	179	171	350
Total	877	924	1801

MR. EIBEL MANAGER.

As stated in the New North of May 30, Mr. E. A. Edmonds retired as manager of the Paper Mill, Saturday and Mr. Eibel was elected to the place. Mr. Edmonds has been at the head of the mill since the beginning of the construction of the plant, four years ago, but retires to look after his own interests in many other large enterprises.

Since Mr. Edmonds' arrival in the city, he has shown himself capable of handling large propositions and willing to undertake them. Every community needs such men. Had the stockholders of the paper company carried out his recommendations and developed the unused water power at Hart Rapids at their own expense, the company would be a few thousand dollars better off today.

Mr. Eibel, the new manager, has had a large experience back of him at office work in a paper mill; he also has had several years experience as a practical man in the manufacture of paper in the mill itself. More, he has held both positions in our mill and goes into his new position thoroughly acquainted with this particular mill. After a little experience at the head he ought to be a valuable man for the Rhinelander Paper Company.

We hope he will be given full sway and not have his plans interfered with by those who know nothing of the paper mill business.

BASE BALL.

The game at the Fair Grounds last Sunday afternoon was one of the best of the season. The Rhinelander team showed great improvement. Their work was evidence that some of the changes made in the line up by manager Bellie were wisely done. The work of the battery was exceedingly good but the team furnished good support. We hope the showing with the Flambeau Indians July Fourth will be equally good. The following

WATER-WORKS QUESTIONS.

1. What was the bonded indebtedness of Town of Pelican at time said town purported to have assumed the debt of $83,000.00 in bonds and paid $5,000.00 to Rhinelander Water Company and how much total indebtedness was said town authorized by statute to assume?

2. What is the right criterion to figure on the value of the water-works plant? Is it what it would cost to lay the pipe and what the machinery has cost or is it, what it is reasonably worth to the city taking into consideration the expense of making it adequate for fire protection and for furnishing reasonably pure water?

3. Was any notice ever served on the Rhinelander Water Company to extend mains and put in hydrants and if not, where is the Rhinelander Water Company so notice could be served?

4. Is not the franchise the fundamental groundwork of issuing the bonds and are not the bondholders presumed to know and in other words legally bound to know what the franchise contains?

5. Has the terms of the franchise been complied with in regard to furnishing pure water, and adequate fire protection and etc.?

6. Why will the bond holders accept $8000.00 less than the face of the bonds and at a lower rate of interest on new securities?

7. If the city buys the plant now, would it not be just another case of a city buying something which needed repairing so it would be adequate for what it was intended for, as has been the case hundreds of times, and as soon as a city has purchased same, it has discovered that the cost of repairs in getting plant in shape amounted to about as much as cost of plant in the first place?

8. Is the city legally obliged to extend the mains for its fire protection and thereby increase the securities of the would be innocent bond holders?

Richard Croker, the Fighter

Is Living Like a Prince in His Beautiful Irish Home.

Former Tammany Chief Has Certainly Chosen a Charming Spot in Which to Rest After His Strenuous Career in America.

Dublin.—Richard Croker displayed a distinct appreciation of the beautiful when he pitched his Tudor castle on the slope of the hills that encircle Dublin bay.

Shown in by a neat-looking maid, your correspondent found himself in the presence of Mr. Croker himself, standing with a formidable looking pipe in his mouth, in the grand hall of the building, directing the operations of two local workmen, who were engaged in what seemed to be the rather difficult task of making the flue of the hall chimney work. It was a study in concentration. You might have imagined that nothing else existed at the moment, but the problem of that refractory flue.

Mr. Croker gave a friendly nod, and then resumed his attitude of absorbed contemplation of the work, until the crisis in the operations had passed, when he turned round to his caller with an inquiring gaze. On hearing that the Sunday World desired to have an intimate description of his home, and permission to photograph the interior, he replied: "There need be no trouble about the photographs," and going into his study brought back a roll of film.

"These," said he, "are all I've got. You are welcome to them."

Mr. Croker had just come in from a walk in the grounds, and wore a loose froze overcoat, knickerbockers, brown stockings and heavy shooting boots. He looked in perfect health.

Your correspondent remarked that he believed in New York that he was about to return and take a hand in politics again.

"They're wrong," said the former boss of Tammany Hall. "I shall never return to American politics again—never! I think I've said that before more than once, and I'm not in the habit of going back on what I say. I'm out of American politics for good, but I hope to pay my personal friends there an occasional visit. When I go the papers will say that I am back on some political business, but they'll be wrong again."

Croker Has a Tiger. There was no mistaking the quiet but perfectly polite determination expressed in his tone, and at the same time, by way of more effectually changing the conversation, or rather the entire center of interest, he led the way into the Japanese room.

Mr. Croker is a man who wants to get things done promptly, and always goes right ahead. I wanted to linger over some of the beautiful things he had brought to his beautiful home, but as we passed through the rooms he was always most unconsciously marching on. Indeed, proud as he is

IS THERE INSANITY?

Absolute Sanity Declared by Expert Not to Exist.

Anglo-Saxons are so prone to take common-sense views of things that they seldom realize the full force of the familiar saying that all men have some form of madness in them, says Current Literature. The sound inference is, as is pointed out by Dr. G. H. Savage, the eminent English alienist, in a recent Lancet paper, that perfect sanity would be not only undesirable in itself, but from a strictly scientific point of view, impossible. For a perfectly sane person—were such a thing thinkable—would be dull and uninteresting—a mediocrity, a nonentity. The point to seize, however, as Dr. Savage impresses upon us, is that there can be no comprehensive idea or definition of insanity, because the thing does not really exist. No scientist can set up any standard of nationality or degree of insanity. One can diagnose a case of typhoid because it is a continued fever characterized by a po-cellular course of the temperature, by marked abdominal symptoms, by an eruption upon the skin. But there is nothing in what goes by the name of insanity to further a diagnosis as that term is understood by medical men generally.

Perhaps, adds Dr. Savage, there is no need to wonder at this, since many have to be treated as lunatics whose brains and nervous systems show no change whatever from the normal course of what is recognized as sanity. Unfortunately, the impulse to define and classify sometimes leads to misinterpretation of a deplorable kind. Such, for example, is the false view, as Dr. Savage deems it, that every person of unsound mind is a lunatic. That, he says, is a "pseudo-legal" absurdity. "Obviously there are many persons of unsound mind who are neither dangerous to themselves nor to others—why, therefore, regard them as aliens? The true difficulty, insists this distinguished expert, is that the disease insanity does not exist.

At this season of the year the best and most preservative is a refrigerator, tables and writing material, chairs, etc., as in a sitting room, and on the walls are portraits in oils of Mr. Croker's favorite horses and photographs of some of their famous relatives. All the chief rooms of the house radiate off this central hall, including the two I have already named, the dining-room and drawing-room. In fact, standing in the grand hall you feel that you are in touch with the whole house. For the main staircase rises out of this hall also and so brings you at once to the upper part of the mansion.

The staircase is a noble one, six feet wide, also in carved dark mahogany. At the top there is a stained-glass window, with the arms of the various branches of the Croker family as given in Burke.

THE MAIN HALL AT GLENGAIRNE

THE DRAWING ROOM

On the left of the staircase, as you go up, there is a fine piece of tapestry, showing Glengairne itself, with gaily-dressed women on the lawn.

Settling aside the oratory and the fine corridor, there is nothing upstairs that Mr. Croker seems to be anxious to show you, except an old-fashioned bed in one of the rooms, which once, it appears, belonged to Daniel O'Connell.

Old and Quaint Engraving. After this substantial piece of domestic comfort, the thing that seemed to excite Mr. Croker's interest most was an old and quaint engraving of a meeting of the pugilists, Heenan and Sayers, hanging among other things of the kind, in a passage leading to the billiard room.

I mentioned the billiard room. Like the large strong room, with the Croker archives, it is off Mr. Croker's study, and is a noble apartment, containing two tables especially made for Mr. Croker in the United States. This room can be entered not only from Mr. Croker's own room, but also from the hall and again from the grounds; and, finally, there is communication with the kitchen, to facilitate the attendance of servants. The walls are all paneled, and decorated with oil paintings in chocolate tints, of many of the chief streets and buildings of New York, including Wall street, Tammany Hall, the post office, the city hall, Central park, Fifty-ninth street, Fifth avenue and the Democratic club.

The bedrooms are in the Adam style. The bathrooms, etc., are sumptuously fitted, and have beautiful tiled walls and floors, and all the bedrooms have their own supply of hot and cold water.

The drawing room and dining room were the two last apartments to which Mr. Croker conducted me. The most striking adornment of the drawing room is a gigantic tiger rug with the head raised, the jaws open and the terrifying teeth fully displayed. Glad to Show People Around.

"Mind the tiger," said Mr. Croker, a timely injunction, as one might easily trip over his head.

"A wonderful skin!" I answered admiringly.

"Yes," replied Mr. Croker. "I got the finest. I admire the tiger." The panelling is in bird-eye maple, and here again the elaborate decorating of the ceiling is in the refined and delicate Adam style.

The dining room is the most spacious room at Glengairne. The walls, like those of the hall, are mahogany,

OF THE BREADFRUIT TREE.

Many Ways in Which This Strange Tropical Plant is Utilized.

The breadfruit tree is a native of southern Asia, the West Indies, the South Pacific islands and the Indian archipelago. In appearance it resembles somewhat the wild chestnut. It grows to the height of 40 or 50 feet and has dark green leaves, many of them two feet in length, which are deeply divided into pointed lobes.

Hidden among the great leaves the breadfruit grows. It is nearly spherical, often weighs four or more pounds and has a thick, yellow rind. This fruit is the chief food of the South Sea Islanders. They seldom eat a meal without it. The eatable part lies between the rind and the core, and when fully ripe is yellow and juicy. The fruit is better before it has fully matured, and the natives rather it while the pulp is white.

Before it is ready for table use it must be roasted, when it looks like wheat bread and is both palatable and nutritious. Usually the fruit is cut into three or four slices and roasted or baked in an oven.

Frequently the people of a village join in making a huge oven, in which several hundred breadfruits may be baked at one time. Thus they are supplied with bread without its costing any of them much labor. Prepared in this way the bread will keep for weeks. The breadfruit is in season eight months of the year. When the season finally draws to a close the last fruits are gathered and made into a sour paste called "mabel."

This paste will keep good for months and is made into balls, wrapped in leaves and baked, just as needed. Bread is not the only product of the breadfruit tree. From its cement, cloth, tinder and lumber are also obtained. A glutinous, milky juice oozes from the trunk of the tree, which makes an excellent cement when boiled with coconut oil. From the fibrous inner bark a kind of coarse cloth is made, and the big leaves make good towels. The lumber is used for building houses and many other purposes. Besides all this, the dried blossoms are used as tinder when fires are kindled,

TO PRESERVE HISTORIC MOUNDS.

Famous Group on Mound Hill to Be Looked After.

Milwaukee.—Through the efforts of the Wisconsin Archaeological society and a concession granted by Fred Faust, formerly of the Faust Brewing company, Milwaukee, the famous group of Indian mounds, known as the Regula or Mound Hill Farm Group on the Regula farm will be preserved. The mounds were first surveyed by Dr. Increase A. Lapham in 1855 and since have been the subject of study at home and abroad. The new Oconomowoc electric line from Milwaukee runs within a half mile of the famous evidences of prehistoric ages, and undoubtedly will prove a mecca for tourists in summers to come. Cadets from St. John's military academy, which is located near Delafield and not more than a mile from the famous mounds, have long made it a point to organize a pilgrimage to the effigy mounds in the group.

State Capital Notes

Weekly Budget Gathered by Our Special Correspondent at Madison.

Madison.—The assembly concurred in the child labor bill, which now goes to the governor. It prohibits the employment of children under 14 years of age at any lawful occupation during school months and requires those between 14 and 16 years to have a special permit from a judge or factory inspector to engage in any such work. No child under 16 years can be permitted to work over 10 hours a day or 55 hours a week; nor can any under that age be employed at any time in places where liquor or tobacco is sold or dangerous machinery used or in a theater or to operate an elevator.

Life Insurance Bill Passes.

The assembly passed seven of the big life insurance bills which the principal insurance companies of the country have been opposing. The first of the bills passed was one providing for the valuation of policies according to the expense charges assumed, the table of mortality adopted and the rate of interest assumed. The second was one prescribing the form of life insurance policies. The committee's recommendation that the schedule relating to expense charge, mortality charge and deposit, and the provision relating to the assignment of interest by a wife was rejected and both features retained on advice of Speaker Elern. The bill was then passed. It provides that no policy shall be issued which has not been approved by the state insurance commissioner. The policy holder is to have the privilege of surrender on a year's notice and recover the full amount of deposit. The policy is to contain a schedule showing the proportion of the premium that is devoted to expenses, to mortality and to deposit. After the second policy year the holder shall be entitled to borrow on the policy at least 90 per cent. of the deposit. In case of default in premium or interest the policy can not be terminated until all of the deposit has been consumed. A wife can not assign her interest except in writing, attested by two witnesses. The third bill provides that a company shall not devote more than one-third of the first year's net premium to expenses. The fourth bill prohibits the giving of bonuses, prizes, rewards, or other extra compensation to agents. The sixth bill requires companies to ascertain and apportion deferred dividend surplus funds and report thereon to the policy holders. The seventh bill requires an annual apportionment and distribution of surplus funds among the participating policies.

Educators Ask Changes.

A dozen leading educators of Wisconsin held a conference with State Superintendent Cary in the capitol on the subject of changing the course of study in the free high schools of the state. While no definite action was taken, it was understood to be the sense of the meeting that some changes in existing courses are needed. Among those in attendance were President Eaton, of Beloit college; President W. C. Daland, of Milton college; President R. H. Halsey, of the Oshkosh Normal school; President W. J. Briner, of the River Falls Normal school; Prof. Milliken, of Ripon; Prof. Whendlen, of Superior; Prof. Denmore, of Beloit; Supt. Bantling, of Stoutenot; Supt. Youker, of Grand Rapids; Supt. Dudgeon, of Madison, and Inspector of Schools Tressler, of the state university.

Proemming Measure Passed.

The Froemming bill was passed relating to the number of signers that shall be necessary to a petition to cause the calling of a special election on the question of high or low license. Under the present law the signatures of only 12 electors are necessary to call a special election on the license question. The bill passed increases the number to ten per cent. of the electors of the district affected.

Favor Burns Resolution.

The Burns resolution for a constitutional amendment to do away with the decennial state census and base the apportionment of the state into senate and assembly districts on the federal census was concurred in by a vote of 62 to 5. The resolution must be passed by the next legislature before it can be submitted to the people for approval.

Against Proposed Change.

The Elver resolution for a constitutional amendment providing that the five per cent. limitation on municipal indebtedness shall not apply to indebtedness for the purchase of public utilities was killed by a vote of 44 to 29.

Fairchild Bill Passed.

In the assembly the Fairchild bill making an appropriation to help pay for a site for the new state normal school in Milwaukee was amended so as to increase the appropriation from $50,000 to $60,000 and the vote of 50 to 23 killed the Keppel bill ousting Lieut. Gov. Connor from the office of chairman of the Republican state central committee and prohibiting any office holder or candidate for office from being a member of a political committee.

Free Passes Upheld.

The assembly refused to concur in the senate amendment to prohibit the state board of agriculture from giving free passes to the state fair to persons holding elective or appointive state offices, and the action is believed to have killed the measure. The assembly committee on apportionment recommended concurrence in the Burns resolution for an amendment striking from the constitution the provision requiring the taking of a state census every ten years.

Roehr Bill Concurred In.

The assembly concurred in the Roehr bill providing for a charter convention for the city of Milwaukee. J. T. Jones, of Monroe county, moved that the bill be killed, but his motion was lost. The bill has already passed the senate and now goes to the governor for his approval. It provides that each political party shall be entitled to one delegate to the convention for every 1,000 votes or major fraction thereof cast by it at the last general election. These delegates are to be nominated by petition and elected on the first Tuesday following the first Monday of next November. The convention is to meet on the second Monday of next January. Its duties, as set forth in the bill, are: To make a study of the needs of cities of the first class, Milwaukee, with respect to charter legislation to the end that it shall be able to present to the next legislature a measure or measures that shall confer upon cities of the first class a comprehensive home rule charter.

Measures in the Senate.

The Harriss bill authorizing the pensioning of members of the Wisconsin national guard came up in the senate. The bill had been passed over the report of the claims committee which recommended indefinite postponement in the assembly. Senator Sanborn called attention to the matter and the senate refused to concur in the bill. Soon after this action, the senate passed the bill readjusting the salaries in the office of the state board of control and increasing the number of employees. Then came bills creating new places in the state library with pay according to the liberal scale policy seemingly adopted by the legislature. The next bill provided for an increase of the compensation of the supreme court reporter from $2,000 to $2,500, and providing a salary of $2,000 per annum for the assistant reporter and a stenographer at $500 per annum.

Nye Bill Is Passed.

The assembly passed the Nye bill providing that if none of the candidates for the nomination for United States senator receives a majority of the votes cast by the party, the names of the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be placed at the foot of the general election ballot under the appropriate party designation, to be voted for by any elector voting on such ballot for a majority of the candidates of such party, and the candidate receiving a majority of the votes so cast shall be the party candidate for the office before the legislature.

Corporations Face Fee.

A move is declared to be on foot to introduce a bill imposing a charge upon all corporations under the utility law to defray part of the cost of administering the law. The plan has been proposed to Chairman Lettley, of the transportation committee, who is considering a bill imposing a license fee charge. It is understood that Gov. Davidson favors such a bill in order to relieve the state in part from the burden of expense arising from the measure's enforcement.

Sprague Bill Killed.

The assembly, after a long discussion, killed the Sprague bill providing that if none of the candidates for United States senator receives a majority of his party votes at the primaries the members of that party elected to the ensuing legislature shall select one of the candidates at the primaries as the party candidate, the selection being made after the legislature convenes. The vote was 48 to 13 against the bill.

Bar Lobbyists from Floor.

The assembly adopted a resolution barring lobbyists from the floor of the chamber during sessions. The measure was introduced by Duncan McGregor and constitutes an amendment to the rules defining what portion of the chamber shall be reserved to the members. It is aimed, it is understood, at legislative agents of insurance companies and other corporations interested in important legislation still pending.

Affects Game Wardens.

A new bill came from the committee on fish and game, designed to curb, to some extent at least, the political activities of the deputy game warden. The bill provides that the compensation of deputies shall be two dollars per day and they also receive one-half the amount collected in fines from prosecutions instituted by them.

Aid For Blind Pupils.

The assembly concurred in the senate amendment to the bill granting every village and city state aid in the sum of $150 a year, for each pupil attending a local school for the blind. The bill providing for a pension of $150 a month for former Gov. William H. Taylor, who is spending his declining days in the Glisht Home for the Aged near Cottage Grove, was killed by the assembly. The assembly also killed the bill providing a salary of $1,500 a year for the chief deputy game warden.

Rate Bill Goes Over.

The bill giving the Wisconsin railway rate commission the power to employ state clerks, stenographers and experts as it may deem necessary and to fix their compensation, went over. The bill also materially increases the power and scope of the commission.

Bill Now Goes to Governor.

The public utility bill—re-passed the assembly by a vote of 69 to 40. The bill goes to the governor now.

Appropriations have been piled up at Madison to that extent that a state tax will have to be levied, greatly to the embarrassment of some of the Governor's "friends," who feel responsible for him and his administration; and there is talk about having some of the appropriation bills vetoed in order to make the totals smaller. There ought to be a better reason to veto than that.

Before another issue of this paper is published the citizens are to vote upon the question whether we are to purchase the water works or not; Friday evening at the Court House the citizens are to meet to discuss and advise upon this important subject. Citizens ought to vote; if they vote, they ought to vote intelligently and there is no way to vote intelligently except to get posted. The man who stays away from the polls and does not vote, fails to exercise his right as an American citizen.

CHANDLER SEES IT.

As Former Senator Wm. E. Chandler sees the point that the Time suggested immediately after the Indianapolis speech of the president: that La Follette, on the face of the issues as now outlined by the president, is the logical man for the succession.

The New Hampshire man is suspected of having small affection for the president, albeit they used to be exceedingly chummy; but he frankly declares for the continuation of Roosevelt policies and names La Follette as the man that comes nearest to representing them. All the logic of the case sustains this view, as the Times has more than once suggested.

Senator Chandler is something of a pioneer himself in this business of corporation regulation. He was one of the first men to be cast out of office because of his attitude on this question. He saw it coming, and he got on the popular side of it. The New England railroad interests fought and retired him from the Senate, and now New England is wondering as it studies the capitalization of the Mellon merger, whether it is entirely proud of the fact that every senator it has in congress voted against the La Follette proposal looking to amendment of the railroad law in such fashion as would give the government some control over capitalization!

Chandler was the first public man in New England who saw the big issue coming; and he was punished for seeing it. La Follette was the man who made the whole country see that the issue was here, and that it was the dominating issue of the time; and he won, after years of fighting and discouragement. There is nothing in the laws that La Follette did not demand long before he could get any support; there is nothing in the new program that he did not offer to Congress a year ago. Chandler picks La Follette as the man who discovered the issue, who forced the country to recognize it, who has proved that he can win on it, and whose legislative accomplishments in state and national fields are now recognized as sane, sound and practical.

The announcement that the New England Insurgent leadership is looking toward La Follette is of the first significance. La Follette has a great following in the west, but heretofore there has been no excuse for a suspicion that he had a chance in New England. Stranger things have happened a good many times in politics, however, than that the New England railroad merger might give New Hampshire's delegation to the Wisconsin man, and set an example to other eastern as well as western constituencies that might have highly significant results.—Washington Times.

STATE AGENCY BILL VETOED.

The bill which passed the legislature providing for a teachers' employment bureau as reported in many papers last week was later vetoed by the Governor on the ground that the teachers of the state are among the most intelligent class of citizens and are able to take care of themselves, and further, that every County Superintendent and Normal School, as well as the University, is already acting as such agency; that there is no ground of public upon which such a law can rest, and that the state should not undertake the business of securing employment for any class of citizens unless some benefit accrues to the public by such an undertaking.

We believe the Governor is right. There is no reason for establishing a state agency when the various towns have great difficulty in securing teachers to fill the vacancies more. We fear teachers might secure positions through political preference rather than merit. The following is the bill: The State Legislature has just passed a law creating a Wisconsin State Teachers' Agency which provides that all public school teachers in the State by paying a membership fee of two dollars to the Commissioner of Labor & Industrial Statistics, may avail themselves of the services of this Bureau in their efforts to secure positions in any of the public schools of the state free from any other charges whatsoever.

The bill has proved of most popular one with school officers in the state and especially with teachers who feel they have been imposed upon by private agencies which not only make a charge of membership fee, but also five per cent of a year's salary for securing a situation. This five per cent of a year's salary will not be charged by the State.

School officers who desire to secure teachers for the coming year, and teachers who desire situations, should write the Commissioner of Labor & Industrial Statistics, Madison making their wants known. Teachers should enclose two dollars membership fee, with their application.

Pabst Blue Ribbon Cup for Hop Growers.

The Interstate Exposition of Irrigated Land Products and Forest Products, to be held at Sacramento, California next September, is expected to show the wonderful progress that has been made in developing lands hitherto unproductive for agricultural purposes.

Immense tracts of hitherto waste lands that have been reclaimed by modern irrigation methods, have materially added to the resources of the United States, and large interests have been quick to see the possibilities of these irrigated lands in producing an exceptionally fine quality of various products.

The Pabst Brewing Company of Milwaukee, was among the first to appreciate the possibilities of irrigated lands for the raising of the finest quality of hops. To stimulate the hop growers to make every effort to produce hops of the quality and flavor that will brew such beer as Pabst Blue Ribbon, Col. Gustave Pabst has offered a $500 Solid Silver Cup for the finest exhibit of irrigation grown hops to be made at the forthcoming Exposition.

The Board of Control have already arranged for some fifteen trophies ranging in price from $200 to $500, and these prizes will make the exposition one of the most successful that has ever been known. Mr. W. A. Beard, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the 15th Annual Irrigation Congress, which convenes at Sacramento on September 2nd, and the opening day of the exposition says:

"The Pabst Blue Ribbon Cup will insure a magnificent hop display at the forthcoming Fair. It is but one more evidence of the far reaching influence already being exerted by the National Irrigation Congress and in the Exposition held under its auspices."

The Pabst Blue Ribbon Cup will be designed by Messrs Struve & Co., the well known silversmiths of San Francisco, and will be one of the handsomest designs this firm has ever produced. The Cup is offered without restriction and with the intention that a prize of this character will stimulate the hop growers of the West to rival in excellence of their hops the finest product of foreign lands.

The Interstate Exposition will continue until September 14th, the closing date of the California State Fair, which is held at Sacramento simultaneously with the Exposition, and it is therefore anticipated that in addition to those who complete for the Pabst Blue Ribbon Cup, a very general interest will be awakened in the growing of hops on the part of thousands of farmers who will visit Sacramento during the month of September.

THEIR LITTLE QUARREL

CAME a little early tonight, dear, because I have some tickets to the opera.

"Oh, George, how sweet of you! You are such a darling—always thinking of something for a pleasant surprise. But beware, for I am getting in the habit of expecting them and I may expect them when—when—"

"When we are married. You shall have them then. It is the dream of my life to make you always happy."

"Oh, George! But why do we go to the opera when you prefer the theatre? Change the tickets. I don't care so very much."

"Yes, you do. You like music better than anything in the world—"

"Oh, George!"

"Well, next to me. Of course I am happy in pleasing you, although I must admit that I was tempted to go to a good show."

"I have often heard you say that you didn't care for music and didn't understand it—so let us go to the theatre."

"But I should be happier in pleasing you, sweetheart."

"That's selfish of you, when you know how perfectly miserable I am at the opera, thinking how unhappy you are—"

"But I can endure it for your sake."

"No, we will go to a tragedy, even though I weep most of the evening."

"Never. I want to learn to like noise—music, I mean. So don't argue."

"I am not arguing. I am telling you, I shall be happier in sacrificing my pleasure for your happiness—"

"Not by a—not at all. I decline to make you miserable that I may have an enjoyable evening."

"It seems to me that if you are not willing to grant me that little wish before—before we are married—that you don't love me at all."

"There, don't cry. You know I worship you, dearest."

"Well, you won't try to please me."

"Well, anything within reason—"

"If you are going to call me unreasonable now I may expect worse names."

"Here's Your Ring."

—later. I see plainly that we cannot get along. Here's your ring. All is over between us."

"If you would only listen—"

"That's just like you men. You say hateful things and expect us to listen and be angels. You talk and argue and won't do a simple little thing to please us. It's much better to part now than—than to have to get a divorce."

"Dearest, can't you see—"

"No, I can't."

"That I want to make you happy by taking you to the opera?"

"Well, it would make me miserable to be made happy that way. I should be happier even if I cried during a whole tragedy at the theatre."

"And I'd be having a dandy time with your tears and no way to comfort you."

"You could do that when we got home."

"Darling!"

"So please, don't deny me the pleasure of giving you the happiness you crave to give me—"

"This is too complicated. Chuck it and come with me."

"To the theatre?"

"No. To the opera."

"Do you still insist upon pulling in the opposite direction—and I do so want to inflict happiness on you by giving up my own pleasure—"

"My dearest girl, we'll go to the weepiest play we can find and, remember, afterward—Go! It's too late to go anywhere!"

"How lovely! We won't either of us have to give in and we can just stay here and argue it out."

"Not much. We'll drop the question and talk flat-keeping."

"Oh, George!"

"Dearest!" —Chicago Daily News.

He Used to Be Fat.

Biggers—You look 40 pounds under weight; have you been sick?"

Jiggers (sarcasically)—I have; don't I show it?"

Biggers—You certainly do, but you never looked so well in your life before."

"I am sure the public will learn to sympathize with my views," said the theoretical statesman.

"Undoubtedly," answered the practical politician. "But sympathy is all you'll get."—Washington Star.

Best Medicine in the World for Colic and Diarrhoea

"I find Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to be the best remedy in the world," says C. L. Carter of Skirum Ala. "I am subject to colic, and diarrhoea. Last Spring it seemed as though I would die, and I would if I had not taken Chamberlain's colic, cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I haven't been troubled with it since until this week, when I had a severe attack and took half a bottle of the twenty five cent size Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and this morning I feel like a new man."

A GOOD RESULT.

Under the operation of the Pure Food Laws, baking powders now generally bear on the labels a statement of the ingredients. This is of the utmost importance because of the harmful ingredients used in many cases.

Royal Baking Powder is known to be the only baking powder made of Royal Grape Cream of Tartar and this no doubt explains its greatly increased sale here.

Careful housekeepers are taking advantage of the protection which the laws afford, and are examining all the reading matter on the back of the label before adopting any brand for use in the home.

When in place of the words Cream of Tartar the words "alum," "aluminum" or "phosphate of lime" appear among the ingredients, they heed the warning and avoid baking powders containing these substitutes.

AWARDS IN BEAUTY QUEST.

Next Sunday, July 7, The Milwaukee Sentinel will announce the final awards made by the judges in the American Beauty Quest which has engaged the attention of the readers of twenty-seven metropolitan newspapers of the country during recent months. Handsome half-tone portraits of the young women honored by the judges will be published, as well as sketches and personal descriptions of the subjects. Since the result of the Wisconsin quest was made known, comparisons have been made from week to week by the people of Wis. between Miss Gabriella Worsley, declared the most beautiful woman in this state, and the women who have won the honors elsewhere. No little gratification was felt over the fact that Wisconsin's representative was among the six whose portraits were published June 30, and from whom the judges will select the one most beautiful of all. To be one of the six most beautiful women selected from so many thousands is in itself an honor, and one which the people of Wisconsin fully appreciate. How Wisconsin will fare in the final appointment of awards remains to be seen, and interest is naturally aroused to a high pitch. Another point of special interest is the outcome of the challenge issued by The Sentinel to the Chicago Tribune, after the latter had made the claim that Della Carson, the most beautiful woman in Chicago, surpassed in charms any woman in America. Out of this challenge the American beauty quest developed, but there is still a great and natural interest as to which of these two women excels the other. As both appear in the group of six selected as the best among the twenty-seven first prize winners of the various states, the question can not be determined until the detailed decision of the judges is made known. This will be officially announced next Sunday, as well as the order of the first five awards in the national quest.

Ratty Fallon's Grab

By Elliott Walker

As Fallon peered from the alley for the tenth time, he drew back with a jerk to make quick, professional preparations for the reception of the victim coming hastily down the dim, deserted street.

"Steady, now, Ratty," he whispered to his excited pulses, for the approaching footsteps rang on the walk with the firm tread of a vigorous man. "You're working alone, you know, and not feeling none too smart—but, here goes for yer sick kid."

His teeth ground savagely as he gripped his short, loaded club—an ingenious weapon of lead and leather with a wrist loop.

Again Fallon squeezed a wary squint around the cold bricks, his face pressed close, his cap rubbing the wall.

A glance satisfied him. "Soft hat, big feller, hands in pockets, head down, thinkin' of nothin', some rent out into a hurryin' home. Guess he won't get there soon's he calculates. I'll hit him on the nut from in front. One—two—now!"

But his prey improved that second of astonishment in a most unexpected, and, to Ratty Fallon, disconcerting manner.

His whole left side seemed to shrink away with a lightning twist, his head moved a few inches with the turn, and the weapon of Ratty grazed harmlessly down a coat sleeve.

The sleeve came up and out as the assaulted one wheeled back. It was too sudden for Ratty, that smashing left fist. Between his narrowed eyes it slammed, and as the thief staggered, a heel tripped him.

Fallon lay upon his back making feeble struggles. He knew exactly what he was about. The man on top was choking him fiercely, but not professionally. With tense neck muscles, the gasps and gurgles of Ratty were a fiction. He was breathing very nicely between them, and the faint movements of his trained hands beneath the other's coat were not for a clutch which should free him.

He dug suddenly at his enemy's back, pinching and chewing. The struggling immediately became more pronounced with injunctions of a violent nature. Ratty's other hand—where was it? Those expert, searching fingers, where were they? Mr. Fallon knew and was pleased.

A dreadful throat rattle, a cessation of breath (he had a fine supply in his lungs) a limp collapse of head, and limbs and the holdup man lay still with fixed eyes and a dropped jaw.

His adversary got from him in haste, pressing at Fallon's wrist.

"By Jove! I've gone too far—confound him! Pulse going, but the man doesn't breathe. He's unconscious. I'll get to a telephone. The ambulance is the thing—not the police. I'll work him back with a bit of help."

Ratty heard these remarks with a grin of delight. He watched the hurrying legs rush up the nearest flight of steps, and reached under his thigh. The man pulled the door bell, sharply, then turned to look at the prostrate one.

He was gone.

"Well, Mam," Ratty closed the creaking door as softly as he had opened it.

"Well, Tim," The weary features of the woman gathered into a smile of welcome. She put a finger to her lips, nodding at the back door.

"Sleepin'?" Fallon sat down in a broken backed chair. "The teacup's quiet tonight."

"Thank God, yes. Pete's sleepin' lovely. Where'd you get the black eye, Tim?"

"Don't bizzness," returned Mr. Fallon, "an' a neat job, considerin'. I ain't heavy enough to work alone. I've the quickness—not the weight. But I had got drunk 'bout 12, an' I had to, you know. So I goes up on Crawford avenue an' slips in the alley what lies between the big houses, an' comes out on Hlaworth street—lonely place, an' a chance at fella's goin' home late, I had to wait, but, finally one come."

"Yea," said his wife, drily. "You're played out an' most tender, ain't yer, my son?" A note of tenderness thrilled the low, harsh whisper.

"Tain't so much that," the woman sat up. "It's more a bewilderin' fella's comin' to thinkin' an' wonderin'. I—can't—talk—but I'm listenin', Tim, an' I'm glad yer in."

"Spoken of thoughts, I had 'em all right, hidin' in that alleyway," rejoined Fallon, cheerfully. "I'm quiet of 'em now, with a grab in my clothes, you by me, an' little Pete slumberin' there. In the dark, 'twas different. Says I to myself: 'Ratty, a tougher man never was than you be lately, an' it's the softness sufferin' in yer an'

'count of Mam an' the boy what makes yer feel like doin' murder for a dollar to help 'em. I see you, just as plain, beadin' over Pete, white an' cryin', an' him rollin', an' murtherin'. Tears run in my eyes—tears, Mam. It was like a picture, there in the dark."

"Yea, sir," he pursued reflectively. "I see that, an' it made me despair, more so than I ever felt. Sure, if the soft spot in a fella's gits to achin' that's what freezes him up into bein' a devil."

"There's good in the world—good in the world," muttered Mam, rocking in her chair. "It's come to me this night. You never was mean to me, Tim, never! You ain't so bad. It's steal or starve. I know—I know. An' Pete so sick an' needin' things."

"Come! come!" said Fallon roughly but kindly. "The lad's reatin' an' better. I'll watch the boy. I don't know how much I've pinched, but there's a roll in the pocketbook. I couldn't see, but my thumb an' fingers knows the feel of bills. To-morrow we'll have a doctor from out of town."

"Tim!" her hands clenched again. "I—I've had a doctor."

"What?" sternly. "An' I told yer—" "Yea, but you was out. He wasn't the kind to squeal. He was a youngish man—Miss Olney's brother. She told him about Pete."

"The mission said?" "Yea, yes, she could come in yer suit. Oh! Tim, there's good in the world."

Mr. Fallon granted, "Mighty little," said he. "Go ahead. What does he say?"

"Just in time," he said. "I'll have the little chap out of danger in two days. An' the things he done, Tim. Like a mother an' so quick. He run to the nearest drug store an' come back with two bottles an' he paid for the medicine. Such a kind, cheerin' man he was, too. Tellin' me not to worry, an' sittin' by our boy, calm'n' him so nice. First I knew Pete dropped off an' he's sleep' ever since. The doctor set there by him for high an' hour with a little glass thing stuck under the baby's arm. By an' by, up he gets, all grins."

"Good!" says he, "the fever gone down just right, an' he give me some directions. Then he wrote a perscription which I was to get in the mornin'."

"I ain't sure I'll have the money for it, I says."

"He was settin' on the old lounge fixin' his medicine case, for he give me some nerve pills to take, an' says he, 'I am, sort of laughin', an' he handed me a five-dollar bill. If 'twan't fer that an' the bottles I'd think 'twas all a dream."

She wiped her eyes with her dirty apron. Fallon's sharp glance was set like a mark of iron.

"He'll git it back an' more," said he, grimly, but his voice quivered. "I'm only hopin' my grab's worth while. I owe that man somethin' an' he'll be paid. Perhaps, by to-morrow the fever would have went—up! Let's see now."

His prize was extracted from his hiding place where he had been patting it with the lingering enjoyment of anticipation. "Let's see, Mam," opening the wallet, "here's ten, twenty! (Lord! ain't we lucky!) Sixty-two bones for the starvin' poor. Papers, nothin' to be wastin' cards—aw—good! Good! Mam!"

"It's his'n," gasped the woman, staring at the bit of pasteboard Fallon thrust before her. "He—he left me one—Doctor Russell Olney—an' I know—that—purse—I see it when he give me the money. Tim—tell me—Oh! you didn't but him bad?"

"Not a bit," said the man, dully, "but if he'd yelled for help—well, I'm Ratty Fallon, yer know, an'—"

"Ssh! I do know," her words were quivered. "Maybe, after this?"

"I'll try," said Fallon, simply. "I kin do somethin'—tend bar, or be a bounce."

Silently he replaced the money and papers.

"Where did he leave it?" he muttered.

"On the lounge, Tim," the ghost of a smile wreathed the pale lips.

"Put it there, an' pick it up for safe keepin'." "Will be the truth. What about to-morrow?"

"He's comin' between twelve an' two. Hospital work, he does, an' that's his best time. After a couple of days we won't need him, he says."

"Hum," Fallon got to his feet and went to the door of the back room. There he listened to the quiet breathing of his child.

He came back and stroked his wife's unkempt hair.

Then, by the light of the dim kerosene lamp he surveyed his discolored orbs in the clouded mirror hanging on the shabby wall.

"For a couple of days between the hours of twelve and two I shall be out," said he.

Costumes in White Mohair

White mohair is used for the dress at the left. The skirt is encircled at the bottom with three ruffles headed by a band of insertion and a little frill of the material.

The blouse, with long shoulders and bell sleeves, is trimmed with insertion and little frills. The undersleeves are of lace; the girle of the material or of taffeta.

Pale pink mohair is the material of the second dress. The skirt is trimmed to simulate blocks, with little frills of taffeta and with small buttons.

The blouse has long shoulders, where it is slashed open, and is trimmed with the buttons and frills.

The fichu and sleeves are of dotted foulard, the former trimmed with English embroidery, the latter with bands of the mohair edged with taffeta frills. The tucked chemisette is of batiste with collar of lace; the girle is of the taffeta.

PINAFORE DRESS OF SERGE.

Other Cool Materials May Be Utilized for the Summer.

Navy-blue serge is the most suitable material to use for a pinafore dress, but for summer wear it would be useful and cool in linen or crash, to be worn with muslin or cotton blouses.

The skirt is a circular shape, gathered into the waistband at the back and sides; the foot is turned up with a wide hem, and two-inch-wide tucks are run above.

The pinafore bodice is quite the most simple of its kind; it fastens invisibly at the back; the neck and armholes are faced in and stitched round, the waist is gathered and sewn to the skirt-band under a pointed band of the serge.

Material required: 5 yards 46 inches wide.

Simple Jersey Petticoats.

Jersey petticoats are much worn, and too much cannot be said in praise of them, for they are simply constructed, delightfully practical, and the bulkiness usually characteristic of other garments of this order entirely is done away with.

Shipping over the head, the lightweight Jersey top stretches so as to let the skirt pass over the shoulders easily, and as the waistband is of elastic, it at once springs back into proportions necessary to render a perfect fit.

There are no hooks and eyes or fastenings of any sort, and as there is no placket there need be no worry over the skirt rapping. Some models have taffeta flounce with ruffle or plaited trimmings, which give ample fullness at the hem. This style is five dollars. Others with flounces of rustling taffeta are three dollars and make most useful traveling skirts.

Both the slender figure and that inclined to embonpoint are improved wonderfully by this skirt, for it not only gives the dressmaker a wrinkleless surface to build on, but seems to reduce the size of the waist and hips of the large woman and give added symmetry to her slender sister.

Charm in Unselfishness.

Unselfishness is the first step toward being charming. The selfish woman, no matter how beautiful, never has a long reign.

Eat Temptation on One-Night Stand.

One of the most potent reasons for Miss Fay Templeton's retirement from the stage is revealed in the following extract from a letter to a friend, written by the heroine of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," recently, from New England:

Says Miss Templeton: "I am frazzled, bedraggled and weary. Six weeks of one-night stands through New England have laid me low. I'm a quitter."

"Ye gods! These theaters! Nobody can understand the discomfort, the fifth of them until obliged to play in them."

"On the 18th I say goodbye. How glad I'll be for a rest!"

Popular Neckwear.

Fancy stocks are not as formerly in demand, but the tailored stock, with conventional small tab in front, the Ascot, and four-in-hand styles are very popular, especially those made of material with white ground, and small, intricate plaid.

This is an example of a French hat in grey crinoline, bordered with black chip. The trimming consists of a black and grey scarf, two black pins, and a white rose.

Selection of Food One of the Most Important Acts in Life.

A mass, doctor says: "Our health and physical and mental happiness are so largely under our personal control that the proper selection of food should be, and is one of the most important acts in life."

"On this subject, I may say that I know of no food equal in digestibility, and more powerful in point of nutriment, than the modern Grape-Nuts, four heaping teaspoons of which is sufficient for the cereal part of a meal, and experience demonstrates that the user is perfectly nourished from one meal to another."

"I am convinced that the extensive and general use of high class foods of this character would increase the term of human life, add to the sum total of happiness and very considerably improve society in general. I am free to mention the food, for I personally know of its value."

EXAMPLE OF TRUE CHIVALRY.

Modern Lover Proves Himself Equal to Heroes of the Past.

There was a moment of profound silence. He was the first to speak. "You are richer than I am," he faltered, with emotion.

She bowed her head, replying nothing. But now the true nobility of his character manifested itself.

"Yet for all that I am no better than you are!" he cried, and folded her to his breast.

And when, her conscience accusing her, she tried to tell him that not only her father but four of her uncles were Pittsburgh millionaires, he sealed her lips with kisses, and would hear nothing.—Puck.

THE REORGANIZED NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

The new Board of Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company, chosen by the policyholders under the Armstrong laws, has taken charge of the company's affairs and has begun the work of reorganization.

In choosing the principal officers of the company, the Board has adhered to the idea that a life insurance company should be managed by life insurance men. The new president is Darwin P. Kingsley, a college bred man of good New England stock, who has been in the company's service in a variety of capacities for a period of nearly twenty years.

The first vice president of the company is Thomas A. Buckner, who has served the company for more than a quarter of a century, indeed has never had any other business connection.

Associated with these men are others long trained in the company's service, each an expert in his own department of work. Wm. E. Ingersoll, who has for many years had charge of the company's great business in Europe, is one of the second vice presidents, and will continue at the head of the company's office in Paris.

Rufus W. Weeks, who has been in the company's service for nearly forty years, ranks next to Mr. Buckner as vice president, and continuous as chief actuary of the company.

The policyholders have expressed their belief in this company in no uncertain terms. The upheaval in life insurance within the last two years has resulted in a great deal of misunderstanding and policyholders, alarmed on matters which were not very clear to them, have been disposed to give up their contracts at a heavy sacrifice.

This has not been true in the New York Life to any great extent. The company has had $2,000,000,000 insurance on its books when the life insurance investigation began, and while the laws of the State of New York now do not permit any company to write over $100,000,000 a year (which is about one-half the New York Life formerly did), the company's outstanding business still exceeds $2,000,000,000.

Policyholders generally will be still further reassured by this action of the Board, as it places at the head of the company to protect their interests men of thorough training and unexceptionable character.

Good for Evil.

One Sunday a teacher was trying to illustrate to her small scholars the lesson, "Return good for evil." To make it practical she said:

"Suppose, children, one of your schoolmates should strike you, and the next day you should bring him an apple—that would be one way of returning good for evil."

To her dismay one of the little girls spoke up quickly:

"Then he would strike you again to get another apple!"

Ambiguities.

At the death of a much-loved pastor some years ago the vestry of a prominent New York church resolved to place a tablet to his memory in the vestibule of the church, tells Harper's Weekly.

In due time the tablet appeared in its place, where it still remains. It has caused not a few smiles; for, after reciting a list of the former pastor's virtues and labors, it closes with the quotation:

"Now the people of God have rest."

Rations for Troops in Alaska.

On the recommendation of the commissary general of the army, the field rations of the troops serving in Alaska will be 16 ounces of bacon, or, when desired, 16 ounces of salt pork or 22 ounces of salt beef; 24 ounces of fresh vegetables, instead of 16 ounces; three and two-fifths ounces of dried and stewed vegetables, instead of two and two-fifths ounces, and 8-25 ounce of candles, instead of 6-25 ounces.

Grape-Nuts food can be used by babies in arms, or adults. It is ready cooked, can be served instantly, either cold with cream, or with hot water or hot milk poured over. All sorts of puddings and fancy dishes can be made with Grape-Nuts. The food is concentrated and very economical, for four heaping teaspoons are sufficient for the cereal part of a meal. John Henry on the Hotel Clerk

By HUGH McHUGH

(George V. Hobart)

Kee Barclay, Jim Wilkinson and I were leaning over the counter talking to his nob, the hotel clerk, when Dan the Dyspeptic squeezed up and began to let a peep out of him about the pie he had eaten for dinner.

"Calm yourself!" said Smiling Steve, "and tell me where it bit you."

Steve has been throwing keys at the wall for some time, and he knows how to burn the beavers.

"Bit me! bit me!" snarled the old chap; "nothing of the kind, sir! I want you to know, sir, that your pie isn't fit to eat, sir!"

"Cut it out!" suggested Steve. "Cut it out, sir! how can I cut it out when I've eaten it, sir? It's an outrage and I shall leave this hotel to-morrow," said Dan.

"With the exception of $31.72 balance due, that will be about all from you!" said Steve.

"I'll see the proprietor," said the old fellow, moving away with a face on him like an interrupted hoof-stay.

"We got it good and plenty every day," said Steve, and just then Skate Peters grabbed the book and burned his John Hancock on it.

I knew his name was Skate because it looked like one on the register.

"Bath?" queried Steve. "Only during a hot wave," said Skate.

Steve went to the ropes, but he came up smiling, as usual.

"American or European?" asked Steve.

"Neither," said Skate; "don't you see I'm from Jersey City?"

"Going to be with us long?" inquired Steve.

"Say, Bub! you're hellanall on asking questions, now ain't you?" answered Skate "you just push me into a stall and lock the gate—I'm tired."

"Front! show this gentleman to 49!" said Skate, side-stepping to avoid punishment.

Then Sweet William, the boy drummer, hopped into the ring for the next round.

Willie peddles pickles for the fun he gets of it.

It is Willie's joy and delight to get a ginger ale bun on and recite "Ostler Joe."

When trained down to 95 flat Willie can get up and beat the clapper off "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night."

When Willie gets a strange hold on "Sheridan's Ride" you can hear horses galloping outside.

It's the rest of the community getting out of harm's way.

"Any mail?" inquired Willie.

All the mail that Willie ever gets is a postal card from the pickle factory every two weeks asking him if the people along his route have all lost their appetites.

"No literature for you," Steve answered.

"Strange," said Willie, "my lady friends are very remiss, aren't they?"

"Yea; it looks like they were out to drop you behind the piano," said Steve.

Willie tore off a short rabbit laugh and then inquired what time the next train left for New York.

The pickle factory expects Willie to make Pocomoke City, Squashtown Junction and Nubbinville before next Sunday, so he tossed the train gag out first to show Steve that he knows there's a place called New York.

"At 7:45 over the D. L. & Q.," said Steve.

"What's the next?" inquired Willie.

"At 8:10 over the H. B. & N.," Steve answered.

with a bum automobile and when he came down he was several sections shy.

They found a monkey wrench imbedded in his left shoulder which he couldn't remember using when he tried to fix the machine.

She was traveling for his health. "My room is too near the elevator," she informed Steve.

"I can give you a very nice room on the third floor—Front! show the lady."

"Same size room?" "Yea, madam."

"Same colored carpet on the floor?" "I believe it has—Front! show the lady."

"Southern expositur?"

A Couple of Troopers Trained In.

"Yea, madam, it's at the end of the hall."

"I want a room near the elevator, that's always the way in these hotels! One can never get just what one wants! At the end of the hall, indeed!" And with this she gave Steve the society stang with both eyes and flounced out.

Steve bit the end off a pen holder and said the rest internally.

Just then a couple of troopers trailed in.

They were with the "Handl's Bride company," and the way had been long and weary.

"What have you got—double?" asked the villain of the piece.

"Two dollars and up!" said Steve. "Nothing better?" inquired Low Comedy—he was making a crack but nobody caught him.

"Four dollars, with bath," Steve suggested.

"Board?" asked the villain.

"Nothing but the sleeps and a fresh cake of soap," said Steve.

"Ring down!" Low Comedy put in; "Why, we lived a whole week in Pittsburgh for less than that."

"You can turn the same trick here if you carry your own coke and sleep in the park," said Steve.

"What's the name of this room?" asked the villain.

Steve told him.

"To the tow-path!" said B. Brett Macready; "we're outside the life lines. We thought it was the Liverwurst hotel where they throw things at your appetite for one dollar a day, double. To the left, wheel! Forward, march!" and once more the drama was on its way.

As Low Comedy turned proudly on his heel he threw upon the counter a printed card.

She Give Steve the Society Sting with Both Eyes and Flounced Out.

Steve had it framed and glued to the wall next day.

It reads as follows: HOTEL RULES—HELP YOURSELF.

Rule 1.—We cash no checks drawn on papa. He's a dead one.

Rule 2.—Eat all our booze you want to, but go elsewhere and select your snakes.

Rule 3.—Don't call the waitress by her first name. She's liable to spoil your appetite.

Rule 4.—Guests who desire to have nightmare will find the harness in the restaurant, so back up!

Rule 5.—To prevent guests from carrying fruit from the table we'll have no fruit. We're lucky to have the table.

Rule 6.—If you feel tired, go away back and sit down.

Rule 7.—In case of fire jump out the window and turn to the left.

Rule 8.—Breakfast from four to three; dinner from hand to mouth, and supper from what's left over.

Rule 9.—Hug as many high-balls as you please, but don't wave the red flag in the office—you might disturb Harold Spotwood, the room clerk. He was out late last night.

Rule 10.—If you don't like your room, kick the bell-boy. Apply at the office for spliced shoes.

Rule 11.—If you don't see what you want ask for it and you'll get it—good and hard!

Rule 12.—Ask the bar-keeper to let you have one of our justly celebrated high kicks. It will do you good.

Rule 13.—Try our famous potato salad; apply to the night watchman.

Rule 14.—All the shines are not in the barbers' shop. Lie down, Fido.

Rule 15.—That will be about all from you. 1901, by C.

DOES JAPAN COVET HAWAII

JAPANESE LABORERS IN THE CANE FIELD. MAP SHOWING STRATEGIC POSITION OF HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

Japan says she does not want Hawaii, while at the same time she keeps sending her people to the island by the hundreds and thousands. There are at the present time some 50,000 of the loyal subjects of the mikado on the island, and these, to the thinking of some Americans, are a menace to the interests of the United States and are but the initial step to the confiscation of the group of islands by Japan when favorable opportunity shall present itself. On the other hand, if we are to take Japan's word for it as expressed by her most prominent and influential statesmen, Japan has no more thought of gaining possession of this outpost of Columbia in the Pacific than she has of going still further west and annexing California, a thing which some alarmists at San Francisco are trying to make themselves believe is possible.

It is not only claimed that Japan is encouraging her people to settle in Hawaii, but that she is sending former soldiers there who are prepared to take orders from representatives of their emperor in preparation for war. However much or little there may be in all this talk, it is certain that Hawaii is rapidly being Japanned. The little, aggressive brown men outnumber the whites seven to one. There are more than 35,000 Chinese and only about 65,000 of other people. But when one talks of conquest, military or commercial, one counts only the able bodied men, men who can carry a hoe or a gun, wield a sword or a pen—and of these there are more than 50,000 and perhaps 60,000 Japanese, forming from 51 to 60 per cent. of the male population. With the 20,000 Chinese men three-fourths of all the people capable of performing the duties of a soldier are Asiatics. Of whites, the men who are sworn to defend American interests, there are fewer than 10,000, and many of these are Portuguese and other Europeans without concern in the glory of the Stars and Stripes.

It is apparent that in Hawaii the balance of manual strength lies with the Japanese. Joined by his brethren of the queue, it would mean three to one against all others here, and seven or more to one against the whites.

Rather a long shot for Uncle Sam to play in these troublous times, even if the race is straight and to the speediest.

But what are the Japanese doing here? One may listen to strange stories of honest laborers assembled by company and regiment in moonlit fields, of drills at midnight in lonely places and other weird, incredible tales of warlike preparations by the mikado's men in Hawaii now. Sift them out and you have but a thin substance for the ominous mass said to shadow our sovereignty. Perhaps a band of Pako youths, Chinese cadets in Christian schools, flash their thin bayonets in the cool of the evening out Kailahi way or wave their powder swords under the plummy palms or in the clearings of the sugar and paddy fields.

Ask Gov. Carter or the police and they smile indulgently, as if to say many have been bewitched by the sun of kinonons and wooden clogs. But whisper to "Dob" Kidd, a leading journalist here, or to "Scotty," the leading dispensary proprietor, or to a hundred others not helping to rule the islands, and they will draw vivid pictures of what they have seen. Differences of opinion are many, but the man in the street here believes Japan just waits to take into her mass these fair coral dots, that the embalmment of Nippon is to float the red ball on the white field over Capt. Cook's discovery, and that every last mother's son of Japan will arise at a prearranged signal and seize the government.

These ideas have become prevalent.

WAS HARD TO CONVINCE.
New York Conductor Had to Be Shown the "Sign."

That there are some surface cars conductors whose knowledge of places and things along their route is limited wholly to the signs and placards in sight, was demonstrated in a rather curious way not long ago to C. D. Menecey, secretary-treasurer of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company. Mr. Menecey boarded a Flatbush avenue car at Borough Hall and asked the conductor; whether the car would pass the Long Island railroad depot. "Now," replied the conductor. "How long have you been on the road?" "Three months." In front of the Long Island depot the motorman brought the car up with a jerk. "If I thought you didn't stop at this Long Island railroad depot," said Mr. Menecey. "Didn't the railroad depot?" was the sharp retort. "This is the post-office. Don't you see the sign?" Mr. Menecey followed the course of the Sporting Gossip.

That yachting as a sport is growing fast, not only in this country, but all over the world, is shown by the number of yachts that are built, by the number of races arranged and by the increase in the number of yacht clubs. There are now in this country nearly 3,500 yachts that are of sufficient importance to be placed in the yacht registers. There are more than 500 yacht clubs that are registered, and there are many small yachts, thousands of them, that are sailed on small inland lakes and rivers, and many yacht clubs, also small, that are not registered. Along the coast line there are to be found yachts in every harbor, and so it is in the interior of lakes that are large or small. The yacht clubs have in the last few years done much to boom the sport. Through the Atlantic coast conference uniform rules have been adopted and now these rules are being accepted by other organizations all over the country. The clubs are working together in the interest of the sport and there are now no clashes in dates and all is smooth sailing for the yacht owner until he gets his boat into a regatta and then he has all the trouble and storm he wants. It is the same on the other side of the Atlantic. The international conference did much for the sport and now all the countries of Europe and all the British colonies where there are yachts have rules that are uniform. This year in England several new craft have been built under the new rules which will be raced, and all are wondering how the rule will work out. From what has been seen of the yachts the opinion seems to be that good, able boats are developed and that they will be fast. The croakers who have maintained that speed is to be sacrificed to comfort are to be disappointed and the coming season's sport promises to be the best ever held.

"RUBBER" LECTURES JAR NOTABLES OF CAPITAL

WASHINGTON.—Official Washington—that is, the top layer of it—is up in arms against the lectures of the "Rubber" lecturers. It is all very well to be president, or an ambassador, or a cabinet officer, and there are times when it is not unpleasant to feel that the eyes of the multitude are centered upon one; but to be pointed out to rubberneck visitors as an object of interest is a little disquieting to one's sense of dignity.

For instance: "There upon your left, ladies and gentlemen," says the lecturer, "you see the Hon. William Howard Taft, secretary of war—the large gentleman walking rapidly with the portfolio under his arm. Mr. Taft, always walks. He is accounted one of the handsomest men in Washington and one of the biggest in more ways than I care to mention, and he has been chosen by President Roosevelt to be his successor."

This is unpleasant enough to a modest and retiring personality, but when a little girl on the sightseeing wagon calls out in a shrill voice: "Oh, mamma, he walks just like Uncle Tom," the blow is almost too hard to bear. If 40 pairs of eyes are fastened on your legs and 40 minds are making money orders, it is not pleasant.

MONEY ORDERS

Pitcher Lew Moren, who is pitching his first season with the Philadelphia National league club, is proving himself one of the star twirlers of the league. This is his first appearance in major league company, but the assertions of his friends as to his ability to hold his own with the best of them is being regularly proved. Moren is a product of Pittsburgh.

The greatest athlete developed within the past ten years is Lee J. Talbot, the young Mercersburg academy weight-thrower, who, though only 19 years of age, has already shattered the world's 12-pound hammer record five times, set new world's scholastic figures for the 12-pound shot, and defeated the best college men of the east and west in throwing the 16-pound hammer, the standard for college and amateur competition. His mark for the shot event is 165 feet. Talbot stands six feet four inches in height, and weighs 210 pounds. He is finely proportioned, with massive broad shoulders and a deep chest.

This is Talbot's first year at Mercersburg, he having previously attended the Manual Training school of Kansas City. Next fall Talbot will enter the agricultural course at Cornell university, and the Ithacaans will then have a weight thrower who is almost sure of two first places, even at the present time. Talbot's greatest record for the 12-pound shot was made a fortnight ago, when he tossed the missile 205 feet 10 1/2 inches in the middle states interscholastic championships. At Princeton, in the interscholastic meet, the Mercersburg star made his first world's record, throwing the 12-pound hammer 190 feet 4 inches. This was far better than any record, whether amateur or professional. In Penn's relay meet Talbot tossed the 16-pound missile 153 feet five and one-half inches, winning the event and beating Horv, of Syracuse, intercollegiate champion and many stars of the east and west. He also took third place in the discus, an event at which he was unfamiliar, and third place in the 16-pound shotput. The next essay of the young giant came in the Yale interscholastic games. He threw the 12-pound hammer 193 feet, bettering his own record, and he also won the shotput with nearly 50 feet.

Glen Liebhart, "Iron Man of the South," pitcher for the Cleveland Naps, has been advised by surgeons and doctors that he must quit baseball. He was ruptured more or less ever since. The rupture has caused him more pain in years than ever. One physician informed him that he is taking long chances, but that if he takes good care of himself he might be able to defer a surgical operation until fall. It is only his iron constitution that keeps him in the game today. He is anxious to finish the season with the Naps.

WAR ON WOOD BEETLES STARTED BY GOVERNMENT

FOR centuries, and in many languages, has the "powder post" wood beetle been discussed and played against. Many government experts of many countries have studied this pest of seasoned woods, but little progress has been accomplished towards its destruction. Our own government is now taking a hand in investigating the "powder post" beetle. The beetle attacks seasoned wood only, especially the white or sap portion, and so warping has become the ravages that makers of furniture and vehicles are at great annual loss owing to the silent and steady boring and bedding in the dry material. Hickory, oak and ash are the woods generally most affected. These beetles are silent fliers tearing down the fences, and barns and homes of men. They feast in the polished furniture in the parlor, and gnaw at the coffins in the undertakers' warehouses. They eat away the chair that we rest in to-day and the piano sounding forth the sweetest melodies in the death grapple of the "powder post" beetles. The treatment for the pest, so far as studied out, consists in destroying by fire. A piece of lumber may be affected in one end only. Saw that end off and burn it. It is the cure. The beetle has been killed in valuable pieces of lumber by putting the material in a close room and subjecting the lumber to a hot steam bath as possible. Other means of destruction consist in killing the lumber and giving it as much dry heat as possible.

FORESTRY CHIEF TURNS DEAF EAR TO SOCIETY

ONE of the interesting young bachelors of the present day now very much in the public eye is Gifford Pinchot, chief of the bureau of forestry, department of agriculture, now on a pilgrimage in the west, instructing men who will come to hear on the wisdom of the administration's land policy. Mr. Pinchot, the "G. P." of the department, to whom all important questions pertaining to the public domain are referred, the intimate personal friend of the chief executive and member of the White House tennis board, is one of those rare spirits in love with his profession who works for love and glory rather than public applause and the coin of the realm.

On accepting his position in the department at a salary of $2,000 a year, he built himself a $200,000 house on the most fashionable block of Rhode Island avenue, where he gives one of the largest receptions each season, in honor of the agricultural forestry convention. The rest of the season his mother, Mrs. James W. Pinchot, of New York, entertains the smart and the great at a succession of dinners and receptions unsurpassed by any hostess in Washington.

When he built this home Gifford Pinchot was engaged to be married, his fiancée, like himself, being young, earnest, wealthy and of New York. Four hundred. The death of his sweetheart under most pathetic circumstances turned young Pinchot to his profession with redoubled fervor, and since then he has turned a deaf ear to society and the alluring attention which would naturally be bestowed upon the most eligi-

Gossip of People and Events Gathered in Washington

"RUBBER" LECTURES JAR NOTABLES OF CAPITAL

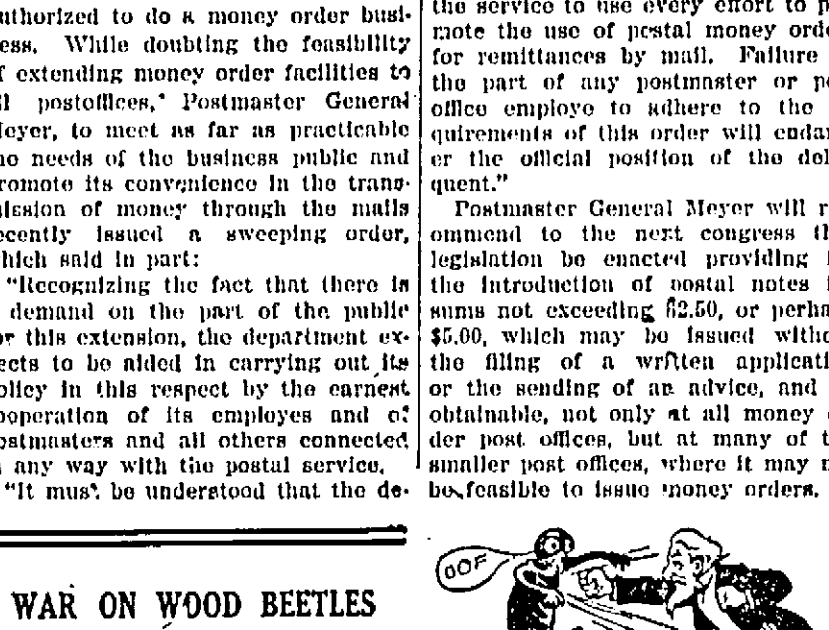

WASHINGTON.—Official Washington—that is, the top layer of it—is up in arms against the lectures of the "Rubber" lecturers. It is all very well to be president, or an ambassador, or a cabinet officer, and there are times when it is not unpleasant to feel that the eyes of the multitude are centered upon one; but to be pointed out to rubberneck visitors as an object of interest is a little disquieting to one's sense of dignity.

For instance: "There upon your left, ladies and gentlemen," says the lecturer, "you see the Hon. William Howard Taft, secretary of war—the large gentleman walking rapidly with the portfolio under his arm. Mr. Taft, always walks. He is accounted one of the handsomest men in Washington and one of the biggest in more ways than I care to mention, and he has been chosen by President Roosevelt to be his successor."

This is unpleasant enough to a modest and retiring personality, but when a little girl on the sightseeing wagon calls out in a shrill voice: "Oh, mamma, he walks just like Uncle Tom," the blow is almost too hard to bear. If 40 pairs of eyes are fastened on your legs and 40 minds are making money orders, it is not pleasant.

The greatest athlete developed within the past ten years is Lee J. Talbot, the young Mercersburg academy weight-thrower, who, though only 19 years of age, has already shattered the world's 12-pound hammer record five times, set new world's scholastic figures for the 12-pound shot, and defeated the best college men of the east and west in throwing the 16-pound hammer, the standard for college and amateur competition. His mark for the shot event is 165 feet. Talbot stands six feet four inches in height, and weighs 210 pounds. He is finely proportioned, with massive broad shoulders and a deep chest.

This is Talbot's first year at Mercersburg, he having previously attended the Manual Training school of Kansas City. Next fall Talbot will enter the agricultural course at Cornell university, and the Ithacaans will then have a weight thrower who is almost sure of two first places, even at the present time. Talbot's greatest record for the 12-pound shot was made a fortnight ago, when he tossed the missile 205 feet 10 1/2 inches in the middle states interscholastic championships. At Princeton, in the interscholastic meet, the Mercersburg star made his first world's record, throwing the 12-pound hammer 190 feet 4 inches. This was far better than any record, whether amateur or professional. In Penn's relay meet Talbot tossed the 16-pound missile 153 feet five and one-half inches, winning the event and beating Horv, of Syracuse, intercollegiate champion and many stars of the east and west. He also took third place in the discus, an event at which he was unfamiliar, and third place in the 16-pound shotput. The next essay of the young giant came in the Yale interscholastic games. He threw the 12-pound hammer 193 feet, bettering his own record, and he also won the shotput with nearly 50 feet.

Glen Liebhart, "Iron Man of the South," pitcher for the Cleveland Naps, has been advised by surgeons and doctors that he must quit baseball. He was ruptured more or less ever since. The rupture has caused him more pain in years than ever. One physician informed him that he is taking long chances, but that if he takes good care of himself he might be able to defer a surgical operation until fall. It is only his iron constitution that keeps him in the game today. He is anxious to finish the season with the Naps.

TREATMENT INDUCED A CHILL.

Remedy Given in Hospital Tent Must Have Been Pleasant.

The captain tells a story which runs something like this: In camp one morning the first sergeant reported that Private B— had a chill. "Is it a serious one?" asked the captain. "Well, sir, I don't know just how serious it is, but it's a big one, for it seems to be all over him, and he weighs 200 pounds. On seeing him the captain found him looking rather blue, and instructed the first sergeant to send him to the surgeon in charge of a corporal.

Soon after breakfast the captain saw the corporal and asked him how the man was getting on. "Oh, he's all right now," was the reply. "I took him up to the hospital tent, and when I saw what kind of medicine the doctor gave him I had a chill too."—Army and Navy Life.

The Mules Understood.

A story is told of Sergeant Kanto Nelson, who spent some of his early years in a logging camp. He there discovered the necessity of certain emphatic language in order to make mules move. "All varieties" of tongues were in demand in that camp: Scandinavian, German, Italian—but none of the words used seemed to have the explosive force to adjust the tempo of the mule to the desired pace. Along came a strapping Irishman, who used some popular explosives, usually indicated in print by blank, blank, or ———. The mules moved! "There's a language all mules understand," said the Irishman,—"and it's not my mother tongue, either."—Joe Mitchell Chapple, in National Magazine.

NERVOUS COLLAPSE

IS OFTEN PREVENTED BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

Taken When the First Warning Symptoms Are Noticed Much Needless Suffering May Be Saved.

Are you troubled with pallor, loss of spirits, waves of heat passing over the body, shortness of breath after slight exertion, a peculiar skipping of the heart beat, poor digestion, cold extremities or a feeling of weight and fullness? Do not make the mistake of thinking that these are diseases in themselves and be satisfied with temporary relief. This is the way the nerves give warning that they are breaking down. It simply means that the blood has become impure and cannot carry enough nourishment to the nerves to keep them healthy and able to do their work.

Rest, alone, will sometimes give the needed relief. The tonic treatment by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, however, prevents the final breakdown of the nerves and the more serious diseases which follow. It cures the illness not directly upon the impure blood, making it rich, red and pure.

Mrs. E. C. Bradley, of 103 Parsells avenue, Rochester, N. Y., says: "I was never very healthy and some years ago, when in a run-down condition, I suffered a nervous collapse caused by misfortune to a friend. It was so great that I was unfitted for work."

"I was just weak, low-spirited and nervous. I could hardly walk and could not bear the least noise. My appetite was poor and I did not care for food. I could not sleep and I was able to go back to work only after an hour's sleep. I had severe headaches most of the time and pains in the back and spine."

"I was treated by two doctors, being under the care of one of them for six months. I got no relief and then decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I soon began to feel better and the improvement was general. My appetite became hearty and my sleep better. The headaches all left and also the pains in my back. A few more boxes entirely cured me and I was able to go back to work. I felt splendid and as though I had never been sick."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable in such diseases as rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fever, neuritis, St. Vitus' dance, and even partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

We gain strength of the temptation we resist.—Emerson.

When universal peace is finally established, said Alfred H. Love, the president of the Universal Peace union, in an interview in Philadelphia. "Then many a man who now ridicules the peace movement will claim to have been its lifelong champion. It is always so. We thump and kick a poor, weak, struggling movement at its inception, and when it has succeeded and no longer needs our help, we give it the most solicitous support. There was once a young lady whose betrothed, a very poor young man, was about to set out for South America to seek his fortune in the rubber trade. As he took his leave of her she night before his departure, he said, tremulously: 'And you swear to be true to me, Irene?' 'Yes, I do,' cried the girl; 'yes—if you're successful.'"

Her Disease.
One day Marjorie, aged three, wanted to play doctor with her sister. Marjorie was the "doctor," and when she came to make a call on her sister, who made believe was sick, "Do you want to know what you've got?" the doctor asked, after a critical examination. "Yes," faintly assented the sick woman. "You've got dirty hands," said Marjorie, dropping in disgust the wrist on which she had been feeling the pulse.
